Module 1 Introduction

So you've chosen to attend college at Lincoln University. In this module, you'll explore exactly what that means—from the ancient roots of liberal arts education to the history and unique role of historically Black colleges and universities in the United States, from the founding of Lincoln University to your vision for your own Lincoln Legacy. The readings will also prepare you for your face-to-face class sessions, so be sure to complete them in advance.

When you have completed this module, you should be able to do the following:

1. Discuss the components and value of the liberal arts in higher education, the workforce, and civic life.
2. Discuss the historical and current contributions of HBCUs and Lincoln University.
3. Describe the global contributions of distinguished Lincoln University alumni and your Lincoln Legacy.

Module 2 Introduction

You know what it means to be literate: that, to put it simply, you can read. But what does it mean to be information literate? In this module, you'll explore the five components of information literacy as well as the basics of digital literacy—how to find and evaluate information on websites. Together, information literacy and digital literacy will give you a solid foundation for the kind of advanced learning you'll take on in college, the work you'll do as you advance through your career, and the personal interests you'll pursue on your own. Once you've completed the learning activities in this module, you'll apply your new skills to find sources for your Lincoln Legacy essay. The readings will also prepare you for your in-class activities, so make sure to finish them in advance.

When you have completed this module, you should be able to do the following:

1. Explain the five components of information literacy.
2. Explain the differences between various types of information sources.
3. Apply information literacy strategies to evaluate information sources.
4. Apply the steps of the FINDS research process.

Module 4 Introduction

Four years may seem like a long time, but you'll be surprised how quickly it will pass. In this module, you'll develop a plan to make the most of your time at Lincoln. You'll learn about three key online tools you will use to choose your courses, track your progress, and find experiences outside the classroom. You'll explore what courses are required for general education and for your anticipated major, and then develop a plan to complete your graduation requirements in four years. Make sure to complete the activities in advance (including the Myers-Briggs Type Indicator test) so you will be ready to work on your plan with your advisor in class.

When you have completed this module, you should be able to do the following:

1. Develop a four-year plan.
2. Use university software to search and register for courses and monitor progress.
3. Summarize the key components of the Lincoln University curriculum.
4. Develop a schedule using Webadvisor and the Academic Catalog.
5. Explain the importance of selecting a major course of study.
